The Cornell Law School
J.D. with Specialization in International Legal Affairs
Course Offerings 2019-20 Academic Year

The program leads to the degree of “J.D. with Specialization in International Legal Affairs”. This document is designed to give you a statement of the requirements and mechanics of the program. (Note that an international specialization student may also obtain a concentration in one of the four concentration areas.)

Admission to the Program:

You may apply for the program any time after the completion of your first year of law school by addressing a note (which may be handwritten or emailed) to the International Committee, c/o the Assistant Dean for International Programs (elizabeth.brundige@cornell.edu or L53 Hughes Hall, Ithaca, NY 14853). You need only state that you wish to be admitted to the program. Provided you are able to satisfy the requirements, admission is automatic for students who have attained a grade point average of 2.7. The Committee will find it helpful, however, if you will also state your language qualifications (if any) and briefly mention any foreign travel, work, military, or study experiences you have had, and any courses of study you have taken that were “international” in nature.

Program Requirements:

Students in the program must complete 89 credit hours (rather than the traditional 84 required of J.D. students). The 89 required credit hours must include:

- Two specifically designated “Group 1” courses: Public International Law and Conflict of Laws (Students who took International Litigation in 2016-17 may use that course to meet their Conflict of Laws requirement.)
- One specifically designated comparative law course that is general in scope and includes instruction in civil law systems. The course may have a regional focus. Students may satisfy this requirement by taking Comparative Law: Civil Legal Traditions or one of the other “Group 2” courses listed below.
- At least three additional international or comparative law electives totaling a minimum of 7 credit hours, from the list provided under “Group 3” below.

With the approval of the Assistant Dean for International Programs, a course in the Law School’s Semester Abroad Program may be taken as a substitute for one of the required Group 1 or Group 2 courses. The course must be at least two credits. In the case of a proposed substitute for Public International Law or Conflict of Laws, the course must be substantially similar to the course that would have been taken at Cornell. In the case of a Comparative Law course, it must meet the criteria for such courses set out above.

Please note that in deciding whether you can complete the program requirements, JD/ILA program students will be allowed to take a maximum of 18 credits per semester during the second and third years. No exceptions can be made to the 18-credit maximum.

With the approval of the Assistant Dean for International Programs, a student may receive 2 credit hours towards the 89 credits by making a substantial contribution (as defined below) to the Cornell International Law Journal.

---

1 JD/ILA students enrolled in the joint law and management program need take only 86 hours (rather than 89) but may not count management courses for the program total-hours or course requirements.
Also with the approval of the Assistant Dean for International Programs, a student may receive 1 credit hour toward the required 89 credits by participating as a member of the Cornell team in one of the international moot court competitions. Such a student must make a substantial contribution to the team brief and to oral argument in the competition.

Courses:

Students interested in the J.D. with Specialization in International Legal Affairs will have the following courses to choose from during the 2019-20 academic year. The Assistant Dean for International Programs, in consultation with the Chair of the International Committee and Associate Dean for Academic Affairs, will update the courses in Groups 2 and 3 annually, in advance of the fall pre-registration period. Students are encouraged to speak with Elizabeth Brundige, Assistant Dean of International Programs, to discuss course selection before doing their pre-registration.

The courses in Group 1 are required for all students in the program and must be taken before graduation. Students in the program must take at least one of the courses in Group 2 before graduation. In addition, the student must elect at least three courses totaling at least 7 credit hours from Group 2 or Group 3. A course in Group 2 may be used to satisfy the Comparative Law requirement or an elective requirement but not both.

Group 1 (required)

6191 Conflict of Laws-Holden-Smith (3)*
6791 Public International Law-Ohlin. Thomas (3)

Group 2 (one of the following courses is required)

6161 Comparative Law: Civil Law Traditions-Lasser (3)
7440 Law and Social Change: Comparative Law in Africa-Ndulo (4)

 The Comparative Law requirement also may be satisfied by taking 6177 at the Paris Summer Institute, together with a supervised writing on a comparative law topic during the following Fall semester.

Group 3 (elective)

UPPERCLASS COURSES

6049 International Trade and Development Law-Thomas (3)
6465 Global M&A Practice-Kihira (1)
6514 Foreign, Comparative, and International Legal Research-Sayward, Sondhi (1)
6531 International Commercial Arbitration-Barceló (3)
6447 International Finance, Banking, and Arbitration Law Research-Blackaby (1)
6561 International Human Rights-Ndulo (3)
6564 International Taxation-Green (3)
6567 International Taxation II-Reinhold (3)
6681 International Law and Foreign Direct Investment-Ndulo (3)
6890 Tax Treaties-Reinhold (3)

COLLOQUIA, SEMINARS AND PROBLEM COURSES

6521 International Economic Law-Lienau (1) or (3)
7075 Human Rights as Animal Rights-Colb, Dorf (3)
7123 Chinese Law: Tradition and Modernization-Yu (3)
With the approval of the Assistant Dean for International Programs, a student may satisfy an elective requirement by:

a. taking a similar course in other divisions of the University;

b. taking an approved course in the law school’s Semester Abroad Program;

c. taking a course offered by the Paris Summer Institute;

d. completing a supervised writing project in international or comparative Law (provided the student is able to make arrangements with a supervising professor for such a project);

e. taking Professor Lasser’s Research Colloquium (provided the student is admitted to the class); or

f. making a substantial contribution to the Cornell International Law Journal. Work on the Journal can alternatively be applied to the program total hours requirement, as explained above, but these are alternative options – if a student elects to have Journal work counted towards his or her credits hours, he or she cannot use the work in substitution for an elective from Group 3. Similarly, if a student elects to use Journal participation as one of his or her Group 3 electives, he or she must complete an additional 89 credit hours. In either case, for Journal work to be used as credit hours or a Group 3 elective, the student must make a substantial contribution to the work of the Journal, under the following ground rules (worked out between Journal editors and the faculty of the International Committee). Generally, a student will be deemed to have done sufficient work if he or she does a fair share of prelims, cite checking, proof-reading and the like, and, in addition, (1) serves a year’s term as one of the principal officers of the Journal, or (2) completes the Journal’s writing requirements, or (3) performs the substantial equivalent of such work over the student’s second and third years in law school.

Other Program activities:

The Berger International Legal Studies Program sponsors a series of lectures, luncheon talks and colloquia by prominent practitioners, government officials, scholars and foreign visitors in the international field, to which members of the program are invited. Other activities are carried on through the Clarke Program in East Asian Law and Culture, the Clarke Fund of the Middle East, the Briggs International Law Society, and other law student organizations.